

Key Insights

1. Revenue is heavily concentrated in the United Kingdom

The United Kingdom contributes roughly 85.4% of total revenue (£8.76M), while all other countries combined contribute less than 15%.

What this means

The business is highly dependent on one market.

Any economic slowdown, logistics issue, or competitive pressure in the UK could significantly affect total revenue.

International markets are underdeveloped despite showing promising AOVs.

Important observation

Countries like:

Netherlands (£3,053 AOV)

Australia (£2,466 AOV)

have exceptionally high average order values compared to the UK (£488 AOV).

This suggests:

International customers buy less frequently but place much larger orders.

There may be strong wholesale or premium demand outside the UK.

Recommendation

Expand strategically into high-value international markets

Focus on:

Netherlands

Australia

Ireland

Germany

Actions:

Run localized digital marketing campaigns.

Improve shipping and delivery options.

Introduce local currency pricing.

Offer international bulk-order incentives.

is could reduce overdependence on the UK while increasing profitability.

2. Strong seasonality exists in revenue performance

Revenue peaks sharply in:

September

October

November

with November reaching the highest monthly revenue (~£1.45M).

Revenue then drops significantly in December.

What this means

The business is strongly seasonal.

Q4 drives a major portion of annual revenue.

The company likely benefits from holiday shopping and festive demand.

The December decline may indicate:

Stock shortages

Delayed fulfillment

Reduced inventory after Black Friday/Cyber Monday

Customers completing purchases earlier in November

Recommendation

Prepare aggressively for Q4 demand

Actions:

Increase inventory levels before September.

Forecast demand using previous Q4 sales data.

Launch holiday campaigns earlier (late August/early September).

Strengthen warehouse and fulfillment operations before peak months.

Specifically investigate December decline

Check:

Out-of-stock rates

Delivery delays

Website performance

Customer complaints

Cart abandonment trends

Fixing the December drop alone could unlock substantial additional revenue.

3. A small number of products drive a large share of revenueTop products such as:

Regency Cakestand 3 Tier

Paper Craft, Little Birdie

White Hanging Heart T-Light Holder

generate significantly higher revenue than the rest.

What this means

The business follows a classic “top-seller concentration” pattern:

A few products are carrying revenue performance.

Demand is highly concentrated.

This creates both:

Strength (clear winners)

Risk (dependency on a few products)

Recommendation

Protect and scale best-selling products

Actions:

Ensure these products never go out of stock.

Bundle top-selling products together.

Use them in advertising campaigns.

Create premium or seasonal variations.

Also diversify the product portfolio

Use customer purchasing data to:

Recommend related items

Promote mid-tier products

Increase cross-selling opportunities

The goal is to reduce dependence on a handful of products.

4. Sales activity is highly concentrated during working hoursRevenue peaks between:

10 AM and 3 PM

with the strongest hour around midday.

Sales are extremely low during evenings and overnight hours.

What this means

Customers are primarily shopping during business hours, possibly:

Office buyers

Retail buyers

Business customers

Customers shopping during work breaks

Recommendation

Optimize marketing and operations around peak buying hours

Actions:

Schedule promotional emails before 9 AM.

Launch flash sales around midday.

Increase customer support availability between 10 AM–3 PM.

Time paid advertisements during peak conversion hours.

This improves conversion efficiency and marketing ROI.

5. Customer base appears relatively small compared to revenueThe business generated:

£10.25M revenue

from only

4,330 customers.

What this means

Customer spending is high.

The business likely has valuable repeat customers or bulk buyers.

Retention may already be strong.

However:

Growth could slow if customer acquisition is limited.

Recommendation

Invest in customer retention and lifetime value.

Actions:

- Launch loyalty/rewards programs.
- Use personalized recommendations.
- Introduce VIP tiers for high-value customers.
- Run email remarketing campaigns.

At the same time:

Increase acquisition efforts to grow the customer base beyond current dependency levels.

Strategic Priorities for ManagementImmediate Priorities (0–3 Months)

- Investigate December revenue drop.
- Secure inventory for top-selling products.
- Optimize campaigns for peak shopping hours.
- Improve Q4 operational readiness.

Medium-Term Priorities (3–12 Months)

- Expand international sales efforts.
- Diversify revenue beyond the UK.
- Grow customer acquisition channels.
- Develop cross-selling and bundling strategies.
